Don't be fooled by the "mini" in the title - the pages are full 8.5 by 11 size, so this isn't one of those little pocket books. The mini refers to the length - this book has 14 full-size images to color. The images are just what you'd expect from the title, with some really charming faeries mixed in with abstract floral and plant images. One of the things I really like is that the images of the faeries are also somewhat abstract -- you've got elements such as flowing hair with designs embedded to color, but the faces, where they exist, aren't so detailed that adding color to them throws off the image or makes it seem too much a child's coloring book. That being said, this book truly is for anyone of any age that likes to color or wants to try out coloring again for the first time as an adult. The pages are thick and good quality, so you can color with a variety of media, and most of the drawings are not so minute in their details that you need a special marker or the sharpest of coloring pencils to handle the job. A child with a box of crayons could make beautiful color images with the drawings. The images include both full-page drawings and center-page drawings with plenty of room to add your own elements, backgrounds, and doodles, if you find that relaxing like I do.

Faeries and Flora is a full-sized colouring book for all ages! 14 beautiful fantasy inspired images are inside, just enough for a week-long vacation or an evening meditation session. With thick lines, these illustrations are ideal for new colourists or those who find staying in or seeing the lines difficult.

About the AuthorCatrina is an American expat living in England with her husband and dog. This book is a quick collection of henna-inspired designs that draw from fantasy ideas. With thick lines for those with difficulty seeing or trouble staying in the line and blank backs to prevent bleeding colours, these images are ideal for colouring and hanging up or framing when finished.
